AMERICA TO GIVE HUNS SURPRISE OF THEIR LIVES

Lloyd George Says U. S. Troops
Will Furnish Something of Interest to Kaiser.

British Fight Forward While the Drive
on the French Halts—Petain's Men Beat Enemy Back Until
He Failed to Come Back.

London, April 8.—Premier Lloyd George, telegraphing to the lord mayor of London on the occasion of a luncheon given to celebrate the United States' entry into the war, said: "During the next few weeks America will give the Prussian military junta the surprise of their lives."

Hunt: Launch New Attack.
London, April 8.—The Germans at daybreak attacked the town of Corbie, in the valley of the Somme, Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters reports. The enemy advanced in dense waves. The outcome was not known at the time the dispatch was filed. The main German thrust, says the correspondent, appears to be west of the Valre wood, toward the principal Amiens road.

Improve Positions.
The British improved their positions east of Fonquevillers (11 miles south of Arras) north of the Somme, in their successful attack yesterday morning. The weather has improved and the barometer is rising, although the aviators continued to be handicapped by very poor visibility.

British Gain Ground.
The British position south of the Somme was improved to some extent by a counter-attack delivered in the neighborhood of Haugard late yesterday, according to today's war office announcement.

Along the whole front below Ayette, in the sector north of the Somme, the struggle continued with violence until late yesterday evening. Although the Germans made incessant attacks they met with no further success than attended their efforts in the morning.

Germans Cease Attack on French.
Paris, April 8.—The German attack along the French sector of the battle front has ceased. Today's official statement says there was violent artillery fighting last night north and south of the Aves, but that no infantry actions occurred.

Clemenceau Expresses Confidence.
Paris, April 8.—Premier Clemenceau told the committee on foreign and military affairs of the chamber of deputies at a joint session that they could have confidence regarding the outcome of the great battle now in progress.

"We have an admirable army," he said in summing up the situation after giving details to the committee. "Our officers and men are equally brave. They are endowed with the best qualities of our race. They possess material means of great power. All this permits us to have confidence."

The premier's summary of the situation made an excellent impression upon the deputies. After the meeting an important member of the military committee said:

"The premier has will power, audacity and energy. He has faith in his convictions and is able to bring others to those convictions. After listening to him it is impossible not to have confidence."

The premier told the deputies that they would have every facility for observing the operations at the front. Two senators and two deputies will go to the front on Monday.

American Battles Seven Planes.
Charles Kerwood of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Houston Woodward of Philadelphia, both members of the Lafayette escadrille, have been missing since April 1.

Kerwood, while patrolling in the Somme region, encountered seven German airplanes. He was flying a bombing machine, which obliged him to keep at a lower altitude than his comrades in the patrol, but unhesitatingly engaged one of the Germans. At most at once a quartette of Germans were attacking him. Surrounded he defended himself bravely with his clumsy bombing plane against the lighter battle planes.

Manderson Lehr of Abilene, Neb., belonging to the same patrol and flying higher, saw Kerwood battling with the Germans, but shortly lost sight of Kerwood's machine, which fell behind the German lines, and it is not known whether the fall was fatal to Kerwood or if he was taken prisoner.

Woodward left on a scouting expedition on April 1 and has not returned, and there is nothing to indicate whether he fell into German hands as a prisoner or met another fate.

3,000 PEOPLE WONDERFULLY STIRRED

At the Liberty Loan Drive Rally.
Representative Crowd Gathers to Hear Trooper O'Connor and Lieut. Garrow. Liberty
Bond Sales Will be Easy Now.

An occasion that will not be forgotten in a night's time was the meeting held at Hardinsburg Monday night when Lieut. Garrow of the Canadian Force and Trooper O'Connor of the British Life Guards told of the atrocities of the Huns and stirred their audience so that they felt as if they wanted to give up their last penny for Liberty Bonds and back our boys over there.

This special train which has been going over the State in the interest of selling Liberty Bonds, arrived at the county seat at 6 o'clock and Breckinridge county's inhabitants were there to meet it, both in number and spirit. After leaving the train the military band composed of 34 pieces followed by the other members of the special and fifty or sixty cars formed a parade and drove through the town. Then the visitors were entertained for supper.

There was but one thing that marred the occasion and that was the cold wind which kept the meeting from being out of doors so that the entire crowd might hear all the speakers. As it was, the crowd had to be divided in three groups, one at the Court House, one at the Methodist church and those who could not get within these places remained out side in spite of the cold and heard some of the speakers.

The speaking began at 7:45. At the Court House, Mr. David C. Walls introduced Rev. Dr. Chas. W. Welch, pastor Fourth Ave., Presbyterian church at Louisville and an unquestionable patriot who in turn introduced Lieut. Garrow.

Lieut. Garrow won the sympathy of his audience right off when he pulled up his coat sleeve and showed the stump of his right arm. Dr. Welch said later that while Lieut. Garrow was held a German captive, one of the enemy took an ax and chopped off this young man's hand. The indignation that Lieut. Garrow had for the enemy was not lacking in his propensity. He closed his remarks with a plea for Liberty Bonds. "Let's make it over the top and to hell with the Kaiser."

The next speaker was Trooper O'Connor. He too bore the marks of German atrocities. His right arm was paralyzed from having had two bayonets thrust in each shoulder and he was minus three toes. "It is by the goodness and mercy of your Red Cross nurses that I am permitted to speak to you tonight," said Trooper O'Connor. When he told of what the Liberty Bonds were doing towards helping the soldiers not only physically but saving their souls too, the audience was greatly impressed.

As Dr. Welch introduced the speakers, his remarks were full of humor and kept the crowd in an uproar. His final words were intensely serious and one would know full well that he was heart and soul for the winning of the war. "To win the war, we must preach it, talk it, and work for it seven days out of the week," was his gospel. The value of buying Liberty Bonds was the basis for his subject.

MULE BALKS AT LEMON PIE

Animal Devours Stock in Bakery Wagon, Except Citrus-Crusted Variety.

Greenwich, Conn.—Many prominent citizens of this community whose wealth permits them to indulge in pie were forced to go without their daily rations unless, perchance, it was lemon pie that they had ordered from Conklin's bakery. A plain, every-day mule, that hadn't been considered at all in the food administration's regulations, was responsible.

The mule furnishes the motive power for one of the delivery wagons of the Round Hill dairy. His driver left him in Greenwich avenue and went into a lunch room for a light breakfast.

The mule had a hunger, too, and it was accentuated by the aroma that he inhaled with the clear morning air. He pulled up to the rear of the bakery wagon. When the driver of that vehicle returned from making a delivery his stock of pies was reduced to the lemon variety. That mule has no appetite for the crust that conceals the citrus.

MRS. GIBSON GREETED BY LARGE CROWD

Friday Afternoon at the Methodist Church. Captivates Audience With Her Interesting Talk on Red Cross Work in Europe.

Mrs. Idah McGlone Gibson, who spoke here Friday afternoon at the Methodist church before a packed auditorium, fairly captivated her audience in telling them of the great work of the Red Cross on the battle fields of Europe and of her experiences "over there."

In asking General Pershing what he thought of the Red Cross work he said, "It is the great constructive army of America."

Mrs. Gibson went to France in June as a special Red Cross emissary. She has been loaned to the Red Cross by the News Enterprise Association of Cleveland during the period of the war. Mrs. Gibson is a writer as well as a speaker, she is a member of the N. E. A. and her stories "Confessions of a Wife" are universally read.

Added to her charming personality, Mrs. Gibson is a very handsome woman. She wore a Red Cross street garb and carried a cane that was given her in France by an official for turning in one or more spies.

Mrs. Gibson told of the great constructive work the Red Cross is doing in the battlefields of Europe against a great destructive army. She said the Red Cross had live limpet war houses there that held everything from a toothpick to a plane and from surgical dressing to tractors.

She urged the women to keep on knitting their socks for the soldiers. She said the machine knitted socks last 3 days and the home knit one lasted 9 days. Mrs. Gibson witnessed the boys receiving their Christmas boxes from home and told of one boy who received a pair of socks. He held them up and kissed them and said, "They not only keep my feet warm but they warm my heart." She says that the sending of clothes and food from America raises the morale of the French soldiers fifty per cent. And under the influence of that splendid morale one man can fight with more fury than ten boches.

Mrs. Gibson severely criticized the teaching of the German language in American schools. She told of the childrens' convoy that arrived in France once every week. The one that she saw was composed of 16 carloads of fatherless and motherless children who had been traveling three days and nights in a third class car. There were two children, a boy and girl who attracted her eye, the boy had a terrible scar on his face and she went up to him and asked him how he got the scar. The little boy told her that one day he spoke to a German officer in the French language, the only language he knew, the officer took his sword and struck the lad across his face and said, "I'll teach you to speak to me in the language of our enemies." "Can you realize how I felt when I came home and found you teaching the German language in our American schools?"

In The Trenches.

Mrs. Gibson says, "I being a woman dared to do the impossible and clothed in a Tommy's uniform visited the trenches." She was in the trenches right at the front for five or six hours, while there a shell burst and she felt as though the earth was crushing beneath her and the next instant a tall handsome French soldier who had one side of his face shot off came toward her and as he held out his hand to me I took it and a great stream of blood came pouring down his arm, he said, "Oh, its blood" and fell dead at my feet.

Such are only a few of the many interesting instances that Mrs. Gibson related and she closed her inspiring address by telling of a message she received in a letter from her 19 year old son who is "Over There." "It is such a little thing, mother dear, I have to give, such a little I can give and I will give it willingly if asked. If I may just get my five boches before I am called to go."

"The French, English and American boys will do their duty," said Mrs. Gibson, "and the war will be won if you stand behind them, you soldiers of a great constructive army of the republic. Buy your Liberty Bonds, work in your Red Cross, you must take orders and obey. If you follow, victory will stand by you, if you don't, then God help you."

CARTER'S LANDING

You can't get away from this war spirit. Rule Hawkins came hurrying by here yesterday, we asked him what was the matter. Some one sick? Nope, just going to Cloverport to get some ammunition for my war garden. We met Corporal Paul Lewis Sunday, not in the trenches somewhere in France, but in Tom Carter's ice cream parlor taking a few shots at a big dish of ice cream. If Paul puts away the Huns like he does ice cream the Kaiser will be captured before June 1. Paul looks fine and fit, if he doesn't do his bit, I'm not it, by gosh. Just received a cable—well, on account of the war I will not divulge from what part of France it came—that Bernard Morrison, Bernard Lewis, Bert Beavin, Roy Moorman and Judge Henry DeLaven Moorman had been captured somewhere in France by a company of pretty French girls.

Uncle Hy Tate is in a precarious condition with the "fishie" fever. Just before he became unconscious he called Cindy Weatherholt to the bedside and said, "I have a valuable secret to divulge. Tell Sam Keith, Fred Freeman, Bill Pate and Kittie Overton that there is a fishing hole one mile up Clover creek where the fish are so hungry vicious that you have to climb a tree to bait your hook."

The Lodiburg correspondent and Will Weatherholt, of Mowqua, Ill., have been worrying about us for some time because they had not heard from us for quite a while. Why worry, haven't you been entertained for the past few months by a man more famous than us, the Hon Samuel Keith, known to the literary world as Muffett? We have enjoyed Sam's efforts so much that it is hard to keep us out of the laughing asylum.

GERMAN RAIDS ARE REPULSED

Hun Assaults in Sectors Taken Over by Americans Fall, Says Paris Report.

Paris, April 8.—German raids in the Seuzey (seven miles north of St. Mihiel) and Vaux-les-Palmeix regions (where American troops have taken over sectors south of Verdun), were repulsed last night, the French war office reported.

SERVICE FLAG TO BE UNFURLED

At the Baptist Church, Sunday Evening, April 14th. Rev. Couch Will Deliver Patriotic Address. Special Music.

The Cloverport Baptist church is to have a service flag containing seven stars and it will be unfurled Sunday evening, April 14, at 7:30 o'clock with a patriotic service and special music to distinctly mark the occasion.

Rev. A. N. Couch, pastor of the church is to deliver the address of the evening. The flag is hand-made and it is going to be presented by the members of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Society.

Testing Dairy Cattle.

The following letter has been received from a Kentucky boy who is now official tester at the University of Wisconsin. The letter was to Professor Hooper: "When I returned to Illinois after my visit to Kentucky in January, for some reason official work in that State had let up a bit and as they were needing men badly in Wisconsin for A. R. work, I was more than glad to be transferred to the greatest dairy State in the Union. To give you an idea of the amount of advanced registry work being done in this State is to say that they have between fifty and sixty men on the force this winter and then the breeders often have to wait for some time before a supervisor can be procured.

"Since coming up here I have been conducting tests around Waukesha, better known as the 'Guernsey capital of America.' Waukesha county probably has more purebred dairy cattle than any other county in the State. It is hard to say which breed predominates, as both the Guernsey and Holstein people have strong organizations and are doing special work in the interests of their respective breeds. The famous Palst herd in this county have turned out six thirty-pound cows since January 1. Mr. Palst recently paid a small breeder $3,000 for a bull which he had sold him three years before for $450. The cause was the fact that in the meantime this bull's dam had made thirty four pounds of butter in seven days and over 900 pounds of butter and 20,000 pounds of milk in a year. This proves that records help the small breeder as well as the large.

"The Guernsey breeders are also making a habit of yearly records. At a recent dispersion sale here 'Marietta Maple Hill' sold for $5,000, the same man purchasing her year-old daughter for $2,000.

"I was very glad to note from your report of the dairy cattle meeting of the work that is being done to improve dairying in Kentucky. I see no reason why Kentucky should not be as famous for dairy cattle as for her thoroughbred horses. Some of the more hilly sections are as well suited for dairying as Wisconsin.

"This work is a means of obtaining very valuable experience which I expect to make use of after we get the Kaiser, as it looks like I will be called for service soon."

Shelby county, Ky., is the Jersey capital of America, but our breeders are not doing one half the official testing that they are doing in Wisconsin. That is the place our breeders need to improve.

The "Kentucky Boy" referred to in the foregoing article is Virgil A. Babage, of this city.

Birth Announcement.

Rev. Russell Walker and Mrs. Walker of Hartford, Ky. are the happy parents of a girl baby who arrived April 6.

Rev. Walker is pastor of the Baptist church in that city and a former pastor of the Stephensport Baptist church.

To Make Your Shoes Last.

When your shoe leather gets dry or hard, you should oil or grease it, says the popular Science Monthly. To do this, first brush off all mud and then wash the shoe in warm water, drying it with a soft cloth.

While the shoe is still wet, apply the oil or grease, rubbing it in with a swab of wool, or better still, with the palm of the hand. After treatment, the shoes should be left to dry in a warm but not in a hot place. Castor oil is recommended for shoes that are to be polished. For plainer footwear, fish oil and oleine or any one of the less expensive oils may be substituted with very good results.

KENTUCKY OBSERVED LIBERTY LOAN DAY

The following Proclamation was Issued Thursday by Gov. A. O. Stanley, of Kentucky.

Greetings: Whereas, in this fight for the liberation of mankind the life and effort of every lover of Liberty should be consecrated to this great cause, preserved thus far at so frightful a loss of life and treasure, and to be maintained unto the end, no matter what the cost, that in a better and brighter day our children and our children's children, secure from the menace of Russian outrage and Prussian oppression may enjoy the happiness and that freedom for which we must be prepared at this hour to give all, since length of days nor hoarded gold can be of value to the political vassal or industrial slave and,

Whereas, this light must go on until the end, the freemen of this country will, have every assurance, welcome any request as an opportunity to be of instant service.

Now, Therefore, I, A. O. Stanley, Governor of this commonwealth, do set apart Saturday, April 6, as Liberty Loan Day and declare it a half holiday with the request that it be appropriately commemorated by the people of this commonwealth; that they assemble at such public meetings as may be called in their midst for the purpose of holding discussions of the vital question I sincerely hope the people of this state will liberally respond to the call of their country.

In testimony whereof, I, A. O. Stanley, Governor of the commonwealth of Kentucky, have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the commonwealth to be affixed at Frankfort this third day of April, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and in the one hundred and twenty sixth year of this commonwealth.

A. O. Stanley, Gov. of Kentucky.

Miss Anna Edmondson Dead.

Miss Anna Edmondson, age 25, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Edmondson, of Louisville, died Sunday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Robert Fenwick, and Mr. Fenwick, of Brandenburg. The remains were taken to Horton, Ky., for burial.

Miss Edmondson had been in ill health for several months and during the past two weeks she was in a precarious condition. She was well known in this city, having lived here at one time and was a pretty and accomplished musician. With her at the last were her parents and her sister, Mrs. Fenwick, and brother, Mr. Emmet Edmondson.

Soldier Buried in St. Rose Cemetery.

The first soldier to be buried in Cloverport was Priv. Andrew Eagen, Jr., of Camp Zachary Taylor, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Eagen, of Hlawesville. Priv. Eagen was 21 years old and was one of the first draft men from Hancock county. He had been ill of pneumonia for several weeks at the base hospital. His remains were brought to Cloverport and interred in the St. Rose cemetery. Rev. J. S. Henry said the regiment.

Public Speaking.

Rodman Wiley, State Road Commissioner will speak in Hardinsburg next Saturday on Good Roads. Don't fail to hear him.

WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE FOR THE ROAD TAX, APRIL 20th.

Since the election was called for Saturday, April 20th, to vote on the question of a special 20 cent road tax for this county, many questions have been asked and objections raised in connection with the proposition.

We shall as briefly and truthfully as possible try to meet and answer said questions and objections in this article.

The proposition is: A special road tax of 20 cents on each $100 worth of property, subject to local taxation, every cent of which is to be used in building first class PIKES, under the control, direction and supervision of the State Road Department and in conjunction with State-aid.

In order to secure State-aid this must be done, and the first roads to be constructed are the inter-county seat roads. After this is done we can then secure state-aid on our other roads.

As construed by the State Road Department, we have six inter-county seat roads as follows:

- Hardinsburg and Leitchfield Road about 17 miles from Harard,
- " and Elizabethtown Road, about 13 miles from Garfield,
- " and Brandenburg Road, about 18 miles in all,
- " and Perry County Road, about 17 miles from New Bethel to Stephensport,
- " and Hawesville Road, about 13 miles through Cloverport,
- " and Hartford Road, about 17 miles in all.

This shows a total of 84 miles. This as you notice leaves out of the calculation, the pike now under construction from Hardinsburg to Garfield, which is already financed by private subscription contributed by the farmers and business men interested.

Will each district get its part of the money back? The average cost of pikes per mile should be about $5000. The Sixth, or Forks of Rough District would have about 26 miles of pike, when it is all completed, which would cost $130,000 while it is estimated that this tax will raise $12,000 per year in ten years then it would produce $120,000 and the Sixth District alone will have received that much. Would it get its own money back? Yes, and $10 more for every dollar it pays in.

The Bewleyville District would have not less than 14 miles which will cost not less than $70,000. Would it get its money back? Yes, and not less than $6 more for every dollar it puts up.

The Union Star District should receive from 13 to 20 miles of said pike which would cost not less than $75,000. Would it get its money back? Yes, and not less than $6 more for every dollar it puts up.

The Hardinsburg District, aside from the 8 miles already financed, would have about 20 miles of pike, which would cost $100,000. Would it get its money back? Yes, and about $3 more for every dollar it puts up. (Remember the Hardinsburg District has an assessment this year of Two Million Dollars.)

Other Districts would receive in greater or less proportion than the ones given, but all will receive much more than they pay in.

But how is this? Simply because the State will pay 70 per cent of all the cost of these roads. In other words the State will give us practically $3 for every dollar we raise.

If we raise by taxation in ten years $120,000 the State should give us $280,000 making the grand total of $400,000, which should practically complete our 84 miles of inter-county seat pikes within ten years without one cent subscribed. Yet we know that thousands of dollars will be gladly subscribed by business men and farmers, to expedite the building of these roads, and the State will supplement this in the same ratio as above.

Which road will be built first? We do not know. It would seem the better policy to begin two or three at the same time.

Every cent of this tax will be used to build pikes.

It will not be distributed and expended by the local authorities or the Fiscal Court, except that they will co-operate with the State authorities, who will supervise every phase of the surveying, letting of contracts and the construction of the roads and the expending of the money. The State Road Department will furnish trained and experienced engineers and supervisors.

Will the Hardinsburg District get it all? No, it is inevitable that other districts will get much more than the Hardinsburg District, notwithstanding the Hardinsburg District is much the largest in the county and pays by far the most taxes. Three times more than most of them and twice as much as any of them.

Now as to how the road tax has been handled in the past, and the charge that the Hardinsburg district has gotten more than its part. It is a fact well known by every magistrate of the other districts of the county for 20 years that all of the road money raised in each district has been spent or wasted as the case may be, in that district. That not much has been accomplished is true. How could there be on $5 per mile? But this is simply begging the question as to how it has been handled and spent and the results obtained has absolutely nothing to do with this special tax for this special purpose.

Whether we are in favor of this tax or not, one thing is certain and that is that we will pay into the State Road fund during the next ten years an average of more than $5,000 per annum, and it is equally true that this money will go to other counties, unless we vote this tax so that we may not only get this back but get it back with ten fold interest.

If the proposition were to vote a tax to build our pikes, without outside assistance. We might well hesitate at the undertaking. But when the state is offering to pay practically three fourths of the cost, in the name of common sense, lets have gumption and business sense enough to accept their proposition.

Some say "the tax rate is already too high."

Last year and for several years the State tax rates was 55 cents, on the hundred dollars. This year it is only 40 cents, 15 cents less.

Last year and for several years the county tax rate was 63 cents on the hundred dollars. This year it is only 53 cents, a gain of 10 cents, making a total reduction of 25 cents. If we vote this tax the rate will still be 5 cents less than heretofore.

Now let us be reasonable and fair. Let us quit quibbling about some other section getting more than ours, especially when it is not true. Let us be practical and sensible, and if after giving the matter through consideration, from unbiased standpoint, with all the facts before us, if we believe we can build these roads by this plan with this tax rate, let us do it.

An official photograph of the club with which the German armies "finish off" wounded soldiers. 32,000 of these were recently captured by the Italians.

The Destruction of Civilization

This is in grim reality what we are fighting this war to prevent. The club pictured above—from an actual official photograph—might be the weapon of a savage cave man of five thousand years ago. It is, in fact, the weapon with which German soldiers finish off the enemy wounded who have fallen on the battlefield—on the battlefield on which American boys are fighting.

There is only one answer to make to such methods—the defeat of the German Armies. America has taken up the sword to give that answer. Our Army is in France to help win this war on the battlefield—that civilization may be safe, that America may be safe.

Take Your Part in America's Answer to German Savagery

The Third Liberty Loan is your opportunity. It is the most direct blow that can be struck at German military supremacy. It is the most powerful aid that can be given our soldiers in France. It means rifles and helmets and gas masks; the best protection for our men from German brutality. It means big guns and shells and airplanes—and VICTORY.

Invest TODAY in bonds of the Third Liberty Loan and save the lives of American soldiers.

If you can't pay cash for your bonds, you can borrow a part of the money at your bank, using the bonds as security; or, you can buy them at your bank on easy partial payment plan. It is no trouble to buy Liberty Bonds—it is no trouble to pay for them. See your banker today.

FARM AND STOCK.

Ves Smith, Glen Dean, shipped a load of hogs last week.

J. M. Howard sold Glen Moorman 2 Polled Durham cows for $275.

Mrs. Emma Mattingly has bought a small farm at Rockvale and will move on it in a short time.

Dan Burks had a ewe to drop four lambs. He is raising three of them on bottles.

Earl Fella, Addison, has a nice crop of early peas. They will be ready for market early in June.

An oil rig is at Harried. A well will be put down somewhere in that section.

P. D. Wetherington has resigned his position as rural mail carrier on Hardinsburg, Route No. 1.

J. D. Dowell's fine cow dropped a pair of twin calves, both males, and doing well. He has just wound up his tobacco purchase at Garfield for Bau Clarkson. He is now working at Hardinsburg for Mr. Clarkson.

Bob Duke sold to J. H. Brown 6 hogs, six months and four days old, for $209.93.

J. B. Bates & Son, McQuady, bought 4 acres of ground in the town limits from Mrs. Henry Sorensen for $500. It has a good blacksmith shop on it. Mr. Bates had it plowed with Mr. Harrell's tractor. He will raise garden truck.

Zada Allen has accepted Deputy Sheriff's place under J. B. Carman. He will be in the Hardinsburg office.

Willis Arms has sold his farm of 125 acres to H. M. Beal for $1750.

Farmers are making a fine showing in their spring plowing. Nearly all of their corn land has been broken and is ready for planting. It has been a most favorable season for all farm work. A lot of new ground is being cleared for tobacco, corn is about all gathered and wheat is going away over the top. Prospects for good crops and big ones were never better.

James M. Rhodes lives at Webster. He buys ties and lumber, owns 1100 acres of land and has 500 acres under cultivation. Has over 40 men employed at $1 and $1.50 per day and board. Says he has no trouble in keeping men.

He sold the railroad, last year, over 30,000 ties and has a contract for 30,000 this year. The tie business is now under government control. Mr. Rhodes is planning this year for 20 acres in tobacco, 200 acres in corn and 200 acres in wheat. Mr. Rhodes looks after every detail of his work and is right on his job from daylight until dark and then some. He is one of the most active men in the county and one of the most successful. Says he started less than ten years ago his cash capital was 50 cents.

J. T. Higdon, Kirk, sold his crop of tobacco to Beard Brothers for $14 round. He raised 4,000 pounds on 2 1/2 acres. It is the Greenwood variety and a very nice type of tobacco. A new variety in this section.

G. B. Cunningham, Chenault, sold 160 bushels of seed corn as a result of a little "For Sale Ad" in the Breckenridge News.

William Gilbert bought the Joe Stuart farm, recently sold at Commissioner's sale, for $1500. Cleveland Hamilton bought the Dix tract for $5,000.

Edgar Fife, Sample, is right up to date with his farm work. He has five acres of tobacco ground ready to set and 1 plant big as a silver quarter to set soon as season comes.

Frank English shipped recently from his farm in Skillman's bottom a carload of cattle, 7 head and 52 head hogs sold for $2,173.

J. E. Hooker, the "meat man," representing Armour & Co., Chicago, was here last week making his regular visits to the trade. Mr. Hooker is a fine man popular salesman and does a good business.

Bernard L. Rhodes and Mrs. Rhodes, formerly of Glen Dean, have located in Detroit.

Jesse Seaton is located in the Rod Mattingly shop at Glen Dean, instead of the Joe Mattingly shop as advertised in the News last week. Call and see him at the former place.

Geo. Marshall Wilson, young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wilson, of Glen Dean, went home with his grandfather, W. H. Cox, who lives at Gracie, Ky. While en route there, broke out with measles and his parents were very much alarmed about him. A telephone message, Saturday, reported his condition not serious which relieved their fears.

R. S. Carter, Carter's Landings, saved only 8 lambs out of 20. They came during the extreme cold weather in February.

Rev. H. S. English says he had an experience with bad roads in delivering 1,100 bushels of corn to the Stephensport Roller Mills. He says it took him a week with two teams, 4 head of fine mules to each team and four men to deliver this corn, when if the road had been good he could have delivered it in two days. It goes without saying that Brother English is a good roads man and is going to vote for the 20 cent road tax.

Go back to the simple life, be contented with simple food, simple pleasures, simple clothes. Work hard, pray hard, play hard. Work, eat, recreate, sleep. Do it all courageously. We have a victory to win.—Hoover.

Mr. Worden says, "to take the chill out of early rising, use natural gas."

The Home Boys In Service.

From Lieut. W. B. White.

Another one of the home boys who is making a military record that is worth while is Lieutenant William Blackburn White, of 24th Infantry, Nogales, Arizona, the son of the late Mrs. Emma H. Skillman and the grandson of Mrs. Hannah Hardin, of Holt, Ky., and Dr. W. H. White, of Lexington, Ky. He is also the brother of Frank White, of Huntington, Ind., and James T. Skillman, of Webster, Ky.

Just recently there was published in Army Navy Journal a notice to the effect that Lieut. White's name had been put before the Senate for promotion to First Lieutenant, October 26, 1918.

Lieut. White has had a very interesting career for one of his years. He has traveled extensively and is college bred. He was educated at Vanderbilt Training School, Elkton, Ky., Wesleyan College, Winchester, and Kentucky State University, Lexington, Ky., graduating at the latter institution in 1912, receiving an A. B. degree. He worked in all the law classes that he was allowed to carry an extra work.

At the beginning of his Senior year at the State University, he had 69 1/2 credits and the requirements only called for 69. At the end of the year he had completed the works required for an A. B. degree.

He took a post graduate course in 1912-13, major in history and minor in conflict of laws; was offered a commission by the Bureau of Consular Affairs, War Department, Washington, in the Philippine Constabulary, which he accepted in February, 1913. He sailed from San Francisco, May 16, 1913, spent two days at Honolulu, a week in Japan. Conditions in Japan were critical, the populace demanding war over the U. S. because of the land laws passed by the State of California.

Lieut. White arrived at Manila about the 15th of June and entered the Officer's School, Baguio, Benguet Province, which is five thousand feet above the sea level and climate ideal. The intensive training lasted six months.

He was then assigned to Cotabato Province, Mindanao, south of Manila. Shortly after his arrival he was stationed at Reina Regenta, an old Spanish Fort, soon transferred to Fort Pikit, thence to Buluan.

Lieut. White was shortly made Company Commander at Buluan, over three days distance from a white man. The Government had been trying for years to get Datu Lumpong, a big wild Buluan Chief who ruled over more than 1500 wild people in to make friends with him and his people. Two officers and sixty or more soldiers attempted to get him, a fight followed and the soldiers had to move out at night, getting too many against them. Two months after the fight, the Government and the Commanding Officer placed Datu Lumpong under Lieut. White's control and requested that he be brought in. He went to Lake Sebu, the headquarters of Lumpong, with only 15 soldiers, against the advice of everyone who knew his intentions. He saw Lumpong, took the tribal oath of Friendship, went through the rites of taking over all his people for the Government and turned them back to him as agent of the Government.

Lieut. White then returned to Buluan and notified his superiors that he had made friends with their man and could bring him to Cotabato any time, they would not believe him. However on the named date, he arrived at Cotabato with Lumpong and 15 of his followers, without any soldiers. He was promoted, made Deputy Provincial Governor of Cotabato in addition to his other duties, also Internal Revenue Officer.

On account of illness, Lieut. White was granted leave of absence to visit the U. S. He left Manila June 15, 1916, stopping in Japan and Honolulu arriving in Kentucky in August.

He accepted a position as Commandant of Texas Military College, Terrell, Texas, in September, 1916. He saw that war was inevitable and resigned the Constabulary the following February.

Lieut. White then made up his mind that he was better suited for military profession than any other. He was offered a Captaincy in the Texas National Guards to organize a Company of Marines; he accepted and went to work. He learned that the time was opportune to get in the Regular Army so he resigned from the Guard and went to the first Officer's Training Camp at Leon Springs, Texas, in May, 1917. Out of the many hundred, of the three thousand or more students, that were candidates for the Regular Army, he was marked second from the head of the list by the Board of Officers examining the applicants.

He was then assigned to the 24th Infantry at Columbus. Battalion was sent to Nogales, Ariz., in September. In October they were moved to Naco, Ariz. They marched from Naco back to Columbus, N. M., over 190 miles.

The last message Lieut. White's relatives in Kentucky had from him, he was at Nogales, Ariz., and Mrs. White was in Dallas, Texas, visiting her parents.

GERMAN PRISON BLIGHT HINTED

360 British Released From Ruhlleben by Exchange Have "Barbed Wire Fever."

'PALL OVER ENTIRE COUNTRY'

Report Few Trains Running, Stations Deserted, Smoke From but Few Chimneys—Fuel Shortage in Germany Acute.

London.—All England has been stirred by the return of 360 soldiers and civilian prisoners of war from Ruhlleben, Germany, some of whom are fishermen who were surprised by the Germans in the North sea immediately after the declaration of war, and had therefore been prisoners almost from the first day of hostilities.

It is not because of the stories they tell, for their lips have been sealed so far as their own sufferings are concerned by order of the government. The remark of one of the civilians to an old friend who met the party—"We are fairly all right, but we have all got barbed-wire fever"—is said to contain the whole story. Englishmen know what that means, and there is nowhere any desire to reverse the government's order.

Symptoms of Barbed-Wire Fever. "Barbed-wire fever is the nervous strain that is telling with increasing force—especially in the case of the older men, who cannot take so much exercise—upon the hundreds of men who have spent over three years on that unhappy course," says the Manchester Guardian.

"They were bitterly disappointed that the attempt of our government to abolish Ruhlleben altogether by an exchange, however it might advantage the Germans, came to nothing, and many of the repatriated men are convinced that there may be an increase of mental cases if Ruhlleben continues much longer. You could see the marks of nervous excitement on many of the faces, and probably the reaction from being set free will be felt severely by the men of more sensitive minds."

From a few of the civilian prisoners something of the condition of affairs in Germany was learned—illustrations supporting the general impression, according to the Daily Telegraph, "that the war has entirely changed the conditions of life in the enemy country, which has ceased altogether to display that air of cheerful prosperity which characterized the Germany of peace days."

Germany, it was said, presented the appearance of a country "under a blight."

Germany Under Blight. "I was very much struck when traveling through the country," said one of the men, "with the dead look of everything. Even in one of the great towns through which we passed there seemed to be little going on, and the railway stations were almost entirely deserted. On the line between Spinnau and Hanover we did not see a single passenger train, and the goods traffic appeared to be quite negligible. The fields were devoid of cattle, and on the whole journey I saw less than a score of sheep."

Other men with observant eyes had come to the conclusion that the fuel shortage in Germany must be acute, because though the weather was bitterly cold smoke could rarely be seen issuing from chimneys. Another thing that struck them was the extent to which women are doing work on the railways. They were seen acting as firemen on locomotives and as plate layers.

ENGLISH WOMEN DOING "BIT"

Now Engaged in Forty Lines of War Employment in the British Isles.

London.—Those who have thought that the women of England might not have been doing their bit in the prosecution of the war were astonished when they entered the Imperial war exhibition at Burlington House to see forty different uniforms worn by women in service. These show that women are engaged as messengers, munition and agricultural workers, nurses, etc., and that they are the pride of the girlhood of the country.

Not satisfied with this showing the women managers of the exhibition have issued an appeal to have women engaged in out of the way positions report, that their jobs may be added to the daily increasing lists.

Photograph Frames.

For framing a single photograph for the wall, a novel idea is to place it in the upper part of a moderately large mat. When the picture is in sepia, the mat should be in tan or brown, the frame brown or gold. When the photograph is gray the mat should be also, with a gray or gold frame. A wide gray frame sometimes takes the place of a mat.

The back board may be covered with a harmonious plain material; a wire easel may be bought for a trifle and attached to the back through a slit made just to fit its clamp. The back is included in the gimp binding at the sides and bottom; the top is left open for the insertion of the picture.

CONSCRIPT IS CALLED BACK

Bound to France on Transport, He is Ordered Home to Care for Parents.

Chicago, Ill.—Called back from a transport 100 miles out at sea while on his way to France, Edwin Sweiger returned to Chicago recently to take care of his mother and crippled father. He found his mother taking in washing to support the family.

Sweiger's father lost his leg in an accident a few days before Draft Registration day. The boy registered and did not claim exemption. He went to Camp Grant with the first contingent.

Friends of the family, however, appealed to the government to release him from the army so that he might support his parents. The government took action, but found Sweiger was aboard a transport. The transport was wireless and young Sweiger returned to his home.

BRECKINRIDGE COUNTY FISCAL COURT

Met in Regular Session April 2.
Judge S. B. Payne Presided.
County's Business Dispensed
With Speedily. Tax Rate
Yearly Report of Treasurer.

The Fiscal Court of Breckinridge county met in regular session at Hardinsburg Tuesday April 2, and continued for three days.

Judge S. B. Payne presided assisted by the County Attorney W. Sherman Ball and Ed. Dillion acted as clerk. The Magistrates were: C. E. Robbins, First District, J. J. Keenan, Second, H. H. McCoy, Third, D. C. Heron, Fourth, Abe Bennett, Fifth, J. M. Howard, Sixth.

The Court got right down to business from the start and fooled away very little time. The important business with which they had to deal was fixing the tax rate, settling with the sheriff and hearing the report of the Treasurer for the past year.

The tax levy for the year 1918 was fixed at 18 cents on the $100 worth of property subject to taxation: 10 cents of this amount went to the general expense fund, 2 cents to the sinking fund and 6 cents for paupers. The poll tax was fixed at $1.50 per capita, 50 cents of which went to the good road fund and 1 dollar to general expense fund. A further tax of 25 cents on the hundred was levied; 15 cents going for good road purposes and 10 cents for bridges.

It was ordered that all taxes collected for road purposes must be applied and used for the roads in the districts from which they are collected. All hands subject to road work shall be called to work for four days.

The tax for public schools was put at 10 cents on the $100 worth of property and a poll tax of 1 dollar per capita. This tax does not apply to graded school districts.

The Webster Stone Company of Irvington was awarded the contract for crushed rock to be used on the Hardinsburg and Garfield pike. Price 60 cents per ton f. o. b. plant.

Application was made for $10,000 state aid money. Same to be applied on inter county seat road from Hardinsburg to Brandenburg extending as far as Meade county line. This road runs via Garfield and Irvington.

County Attorney Ball was directed by the court to urge Smith and Graham contractors for building Hardinsburg and Garfield pike to complete said pike as soon as possible.

Mr. Smith was before the court pleading for further time on account of procuring hands said it was impossible for him to get hands at any price and that he did not want to interfere with the farmers who wanted all surplus hands they could get and that he believed it was more patriotic just at this time for labor to be employed making crops than it was to work the roads. He said he would like to throw up his contract and hand the county $2,500 for his release. Mr. Ball said that the matter could not be settled at this session but would be taken up at a called session sometime later on.

The court was not in a very receptive mood seemingly either for Mr. Smith's check or for the throwing up of his contract. On motion of Squire Howard the court adjourned for dinner.

A committee composed of County Judge S. B. Payne, Paul Compton County Treasurer and A. T. Beard County Clerk was ordered to refund all outstanding county bonds now due at a rate of interest not to exceed 5 percent for not less than one year or for more than six years.

The County Clerk was ordered to keep a list of all bonds refunded.

The Clerk was also authorized to install a loose leaf system of book keeping and recording and to purchase a suitable typewriter for using the system.

He was also authorized to install a telephone in his office for the use of the county officers and the public in general.

County Attorney Ball and Judge Payne were authorized to take up the matter of disposing the County Poorhouse Farm and make a report at the October term. It was stated that the present farm was too small to take care of all the inmates.

County Clerk Beard was authorized to notify Culvert Pipe Manufacturers to submit bids for one years supply of Culverts.

Sheriffs Settlement.

Ex Sheriff A. T. Beard was allowed the sum of $163 for erroneous assessments on $15,202 property $2,500 on titles erroneously assessed. He was further allowed exonerations on $102,872. Mr. Beard owed the county a balance of $30,828.10 for which he gave his check in full settlement. The check was turned over to Paul Compton County Treasurer. Mr. Compton turned over three railroad bonds No. 10, 12 and 16 for $1000 each same having been paid and cancelled. The bonds were burned in the presence of the court. The Treasurer was authorized to call two more bonds for $1000 each.

W. J. Hall was reelected Poorhouse Commissioner, C. M. Heston, Pauper Commissioner and Dr. J. E. Kincheloe, County Physician.

The Magistrates reported after examination of all the public property, that it was found in good first class condition

U. S. Health Officer Puts Ban on Hog Raising.

The Government Health Department, under the direction of Maj. Frick has called upon Mayor Smith and Health Officer Baker to strictly enforce the ruling of the State Board of Health regulating the housing of pigs within the city limits.

The Mayor expresses the desire and hope that the public will not kill the pigs, but will endeavor to dispose of them outside the city limits.

The Board of Public Works supplemented the above with the following statement:

"Under the authority conferred by the Kentucky statutes, the State Board of Health of Kentucky has established and published certain rules and regulations which have the authority of law. Under Rule 2 (Report of State Board of Health, 1918 09, page 18) there is the following with reference to pigs:

"Between the first day of May and the first day of November no hogs shall be kept within one-half mile of the corporate limits of any city or town in this State. The local board shall order the removal of such animals at any other time when they appear to be prejudicial to the public health, safety and comfort."

"This being a State regulation, the Magistrate's courts in the city have jurisdiction to enforce this provision, and it has been the practice of the Health Department in the past to take out warrants in such courts for violation thereof, as quicker action can thus be obtained than in the Ordinance Court, which sits only once every two weeks."—Courier-Journal.

Heroes Versus Horses.

For the past quarter of a century, I have been making weekly trips (with few exceptions) to Cloverport with a load of milk and butter and although on each trip I leave my team for a short distance never until last Friday afternoon have I allowed them to get away. It is interesting to watch the actions of lookers as a frightened or vicious horse dashes through the principal street of a country town; some look on in smiling indifference, others shrink in craven fear while others steps forward a man possessing the innate courage to risk limb and life for the glory of hurling to his lauchres an impetuous horse.

The hero of Friday afternoon proved to be Joe Monnen, the popular and accomplished proprietor of an East side grocery. Mr. Monnen at his place of business hearing the clatter of galloping hoofs on the bridge spanning Clover Creek, rushed to the street and seeing the on-coming team barred their way resolved to do battle to prove the supremacy of man over the equine race.

The team was a pair of plow-wearied brood mares, hooked to a delivery wagon under brake pressure and as they ascended the incline from the bridge they became an early prey in the grasp of the sturdy and determined man. I was on the scene in a few moments and stroking the mare that seemed perturbed, she crooned and me thinks she said, "Master I only want a little sport." The team waked home at a three mile gait as passive as if nothing had occurred. It was the memory of a beautiful afternoon of departing March.

Mr. Monnen's courage is typical of that greater valor, gallantry and devotion to duty displayed by the multilied thousands of heroic men, who under the banners of Britain, France and The United States surge to and fro in their titanic struggle, eye death grapple with the merciless and craven hordes on the fair flung Western battle line in despolled, desecrated and ravished France.

May the "God of Hosts" shelter and strengthen our legions as they struggle, fight and die in this hour of old Earth's travail fight to a finish for the supremacy and perpetuity of human rights and human liberty.

CHAPTER V.

The Right to Live and Love.
Dinner was over in the dull old dining room. The Archduchess Annunciatina lighted a cigarette, and glanced across the table at Hedwig. Hedwig had been very silent during the meal. She had replied civilly when spoken to, but that was all. Her mother, who had caught the countess' trick of narrowing her eyes, inspected her from under lowered lids. "Well?" she said. "Are you still sulky?" "I? Not at all, mother." Her head went up, and she confronted her mother squarely. "I should like to inquire, if I may," observed the archduchess, "just how you have spent the day. This morning, for instance?" Hedwig shrugged her shoulders, but her color rose. "I rode." "Where?" "At the riding school, with Otto." "Only with Otto?" "Captain Larisch was there." "Of course! Then you have practically spent the day with him!" "I have spent most of the day with Otto." "This devotion to Otto—it is new, I think. You were eager to get out of the nursery. Now, it appears, you must fly back to schoolroom teas and other absurdities. I should like to know why." "I think Otto is lonely, mother." The archduchess was in one of her sudden moods of irritation. Hedwig's remark about Otto's loneliness, the second that day, struck home. In her anger she forgot her refusal to the chancellor. "I have something to say that will put an end to this sentimental nonsense of yours, Hedwig. I should forbid your seeing this boy, this young Larisch, if I felt it necessary. I do not. You would probably see him anyhow, for that matter." She rose, and threw her bolt out of a clear sky. "It is unnecessary to remind you not to make a fool of yourself. But it may not be out of place to say that your grandfather has certain plans for you that will take your mind away from this silly boy, soon enough." Hedwig had risen, and was standing, very white, with her hands on the table. "What plans, mother?" "He will tell you." "Not—I am not to be married?" The Archduchess Annunciatina was not all hard. She could never forgive her children their father. But they were her children, and Hedwig was all that she was not, gentle and rosy and young. Suddenly something almost like regret stirred in her. "Don't look like that, child," she said. "It is not settled. And, after all, one marriage or another—what difference does it make? Men are men. If one does not care, it makes the things they do unimportant." "But surely," Hedwig gasped, "surely I shall be consulted?" Annunciatina shook her head. They had all risen. As for Olga Loschek, she was very still, but her eyes burned. "Mother, you cannot look back, and—and remember your own life, and allow me to be wretched. You cannot!" Hedwig began to cry. The archduchess hated tears, and her softer moments were only moments. "Dry your eyes, and don't be silly," she said coldly. "You have always known that something of the sort was inevitable." She moved toward the door. The two princesses and her lady in waiting remained still until she had left the table. Then they fell in behind her, and the little procession moved to the stuffy boudoir, for coffee. But Hilda slipped her arm around her sister's waist, and the touch comforted Hedwig. "He may be very nice," Hilda volunteered cautiously. "Perhaps it is Karl. I am quite mad about Karl, myself." Hedwig, however, was beyond listening. She went slowly to a window, and stood gazing out. Looming against the sky-line, in the very center of the place, was the heroic figure of her dead grandmother. She fell to wondering about these royal women who had preceded. Her mother, frankly unhappy in her marriage, permanently embittered; her grandmother. Hedwig had never seen the king young. She could not picture him as a lover. To her he was a fine and lonely figure. But romantic? Had he ever been romantic? She slipped out onto the balcony and closed the curtains behind her. As her eyes grew accustomed to the darkness she saw that there was some one below, under the trees. Her heart beat rapidly. In a moment she was certain. It was Nikky down there, Nikky, gazing up at her as a child may look at a star. With a quick gesture Hedwig drew the curtain back. A thin ray of light fell on her, on her slim bare arms, on her light draperies, on her young face. He had wanted to see her, and he should see her. Then she dropped the curtain, and twisted her hands together lest, in spite of her, they reach out toward him. Did she fancy it, or did the figure salute her? Then came the quick ring of heels on the old stone pavement. She knew his footsteps, even as she knew every vibrant, eager inflection of his voice. He went away, across the square, like one who, having bent his knee to a saint, turns back to the business of the world. In the boudoir the archduchess had picked up some knitting to soothe her jangled nerves. "You may play now, Hilda," she said. Annunciatina dozed, and Hilda played softly. The countess' opportunity had come. She put down the dreary embroidery with which she filled the drearier evenings, and moved to the window. She walked quietly, like a cat. Her first words to Hedwig were those of Peter Niburg as he linked arms with his enemy and started down the street. "A fine night, highness," she said. Hedwig raised her eyes to the stars. "It is very lovely." "A night to spend out-of-doors, instead of being shut up—" She finished her sentence with a shrug of the shoulders. Hedwig was not fond of the countess. She did not know why. The truth being, of course, that between them lay the barrier of her own innocence. When the countess' arm touched hers, she drew aside. "Tonight," said the lady in waiting dreamily, "I should like to be in a motor, speeding over mountain roads. I come from the mountains, you know. And I miss them." Hedwig moved, a little impatiently, but as the countess went on, she listened. After all, Nikky, too, came from the mountains. And because she was sorry for the countess, who was homesick, and perhaps because just then she had to speak to some one, she turned to her at last with the thing that filled her mind. "This marriage," she said bitterly. "Is it talked about? Am I the only one in the palace who has not known about it?" "No, highness, I had heard nothing. Of course, there are always rumors." "As to the other, the matter my mother referred to," Hedwig held her head very high, "—she was unjust. Am I never to have any friends?" "Friends, highness? One may have friends, of course. It is not friendship they fear." "What then?" "A lover," said the countess softly. "It is impossible to see Captain Larisch in your presence, and not realize—" "Go on." "And not realize, highness, that he is in love with you." "How silly!" said the Princess Hedwig, with glowing eyes. "But highness!" implored the countess. "If only you would use a little caution. Open defiance is its own defeat." "I am not ashamed of what I do," said Hedwig hotly. "Ashamed! Of course not. But things that are harmless in others in your position—you are young. You should have friends, gaiety. I am," she smiled grimly in the darkness, "not so old myself but that I can understand." Hedwig stood still. The old city was preparing for sleep. In the place a few lovers loitered, standing close, and the faint tinkling of a bell told of the Blessed Sacrament being carried through the streets to some bedside of the dying. The Princess Hedwig bowed her head. It seemed to her, all at once, that the world was full of wretchedness and death, and of separation, which might be worse than death. "I wish I could help you, highness," said the countess. "I should like to see you happy. But happiness does not come of itself. We must fight for it." "Fight? What chance have I to fight?" Hedwig asked scornfully. "One thing, of course, I could do," pursued the countess. "On those days when you wish to have tea with his royal highness, I could arrange, perhaps, to let you know if any member of the family intended going to his apartments." It was a moment before Hedwig comprehended. Then she turned to her haughtily. "When I wish to have tea with my cousin," she said coldly, "I shall do it openly, countess." She left the balcony abruptly, abandoning the countess to solitary fury, the greater because triumph had seemed so near. Alone, she went red and white, bit her lips, behaved according to all the time-honored traditions. And even swore—in a polite, lady-like walling fashion, to be sure—to get even. Things were going very wrong for Nikky Larisch. Perhaps, at the very first, he had been in love with the princess, not the woman. It had been rather like him to fix on the unattainable and worship it from afar. Because, for all the friendliness of their growing intimacy, Hedwig was still a star, whose light touched him, but whose warmth was not for him. He would have died fighting for her with a smile on his lips. But he had no hope of living for her, unless, of course, she should happen to need him, which was most unlikely. He had no vanity whatever, although in parade dress, with white gloves, he hoped he cut a decent figure. So she had been his star, and as cold and remote. And then, that very morning, Hedwig had been thrown.

Not badly—she was too expert for that. As a matter of fact, feeling herself going, she had flung two strong young arms around her horse's neck, and had almost succeeded in lighting on her feet. It was not at all dramatic. But Nikky's heart had stopped beating. He had lifted her up from where she sat, half vexed and wholly ashamed, and carried her to a chair. That was all. But when it was all over, and Hedwig was only a trifle wobbly and horribly humiliated, Nikky Larisch knew the truth about himself, knew that he was in love with the granddaughter of his king, and that under no conceivable circumstances would he ever be able to tell her so. Knew, then, that happiness and he had said a long farewell, and would thereafter travel different roads. So that night he started out to think things over. Probably never before in his life had he deliberately done such a thing. He had never, as a fact, thought much at all. It had been his comfortable habit to let the day take care of itself. Beyond minor problems of finance—minor because his income was trifling—he had considered little. In the last border war he had distinguished himself only when it was a matter of doing, not of thinking. But he was young, and the night was crisp and beautiful. He took a long breath, and looked up at the stars. After all, things might not be so bad. Hedwig might refuse this marriage. They were afraid that she would, or why have asked his help? When he thought of King Karl, he drew himself up, and his heels rang hard on the pavement. Karl! A hard man and a good king—that was Karl. And old. From the full manhood of his twenty-three years Nikky surveyed Karl's almost forty, and considered it age. It was typical of Nikky to decide that he needed a hard walk. He translated most of his motions into motion. So he set off briskly, turning into the crowded part of the city. And here it was that Nikky happened on the thing that was to take him far that night, and bring about many curious things. Not far ahead of him two men were talking. They went slowly, arm in arm. One was talking loquaciously, using his free arm, on which hung a cane, to gesticulate. The other walked with bent head. Nikky, pausing to light a cigarette, fell behind. But the wind was tricky, and with his third match he stepped into a stone archway, lighted his cigarette, buttoned his tunic high against the chill, and emerged to a silent but violent struggle just ahead. The two men had been attacked by three others, and as he stared, the loquacious one went down. Instantly a huge figure of a man outlined against the light from a street lamp, crouched over the prostrate form of the fallen man. Even in the imperceptible second before he started to run toward the group, Nikky saw that the silent one, un molested, was looking on. A moment later he was in the thick of things and fighting gloriously. His soldierly cap fell off. His fair hair bristled with excitement. He flung out arms that were both furious and strong, and with each blow the group assumed a new formation. Unluckily, a great deal of the fighting was done over the prostrate form of Peter Niburg. But disaster, inglorious disaster, waited for Nikky. Peter Niburg, face down on the pavement, was groaning, and Nikky had felled one man and was starting on a second with the fighting appetite of twenty-three, when something happened. One moment Nikky was smiling, with a cut lip, and hair in his eyes, and the next he was dropped like an ox, by a blow from behind. Landing between his shoulder blades, it jerked his head back with a snap, and sent him reeling. A second followed, delivered by a huge fist. Down went Nikky, and lay still. The town slept on. Street draws were not uncommon, especially in the neighborhood of the Hungaria. Those who roused grumbled about quarrelsome students, and slept again. Perhaps two minutes later, Nikky got up. He was another minute in locating himself. His cap lay in the gutter. Beside him, on his back, lay a sprawling and stertorous figure, with, so quick the downfall, a cane still hooked to his arm.

Nikky bent over Peter Niburg. Bending over made his head ache abominably. "Here, man!" he said. "Get up! Rouse yourself!" Peter Niburg made an inarticulate reference to a piece of silk of certain quality, and lay still. But his eyes opened slowly, and he stared up at the stars. "A fine night," he said thickly. "A very fine—" Suddenly he raised himself to a sitting posture. Terror gave him strength. "I've been robbed," he said. "Robbed. I am ruined. I am dead." "Tut," said Nikky, mopping his cut lip. "If you are dead, your spirit speaks with an uncommonly lusty voice! Come, get up. We present together a shameful picture of defeat." But he raised Peter Niburg gently from the ground and, finding his knees unstable, from fright or weakness, stood him against a house wall. Peter Niburg, with rolling eyes, felt for his letter, and, the saints he praised, found it. "Ah!" he said, and straightened up. "After all, it is not so bad as I feared. They got nothing." He made a manful effort to walk, but tottered, reeled. Nikky caught him. "Careful!" he said. "The colossus was doubtless the one who got us both, and we are likely to feel his weight for some time. Where do you live?" Peter Niburg was not for saying. He would have preferred to pursue his solitary if uncertain way. But Nikky was no half Samaritan. Toward Peter Niburg's lodging, then, they made a slow progress. "These recent gentlemen," said Nikky, as they went along, "they are, perhaps, personal enemies?" Peter Niburg reflected. He thought not. "But I know why they came," he said unguardedly. "Some early morning, my friend, you will hear of a man lying dead in the street. That man will be I." "The thought has a moral," observed Nikky. "Do not trust yourself out-of-doors at night." But he saw that Peter Niburg kept his hand over his breast pocket. Never having dealt in mysteries, Nikky was slow at recognizing one. But, he reflected, many things were going on in the old city in these troubled days. Came to Nikky, all at once, that this man on his arm might be one of the hidden eyes of government. "These are difficult times," he ventured, "for those who are loyal." Peter Niburg gave him a sidelong glance. "Difficult indeed," he said briefly. "I think," Nikky observed, "that, after I see you safely home, I shall report this small matter to the police." But here Peter Niburg turned even paler. "Not—not the police!" he stammered. "But why? You and I, my friend, will carry their insignia for some days. I have a mind to pay our debts." Peter Niburg considered. He stopped and faced Nikky. "I do not wish the police," he said. "Perhaps I have said too little. This is a private matter. An affair of jealousy." "I see?" "Naturally, not a matter for publicity." "Very well," Nikky assented. But in his mind was rising dark suspicion. He had stumbled on something. He cursed his stupidity that it meant, so far, nothing more than a mystery to him. He did not pride himself on his intelligence. "You were not alone, I think?" Peter Niburg suddenly remembered Hermann, and stopped. "Your friend must have escaped." "He would escape," said Peter Niburg scornfully. "He is of the type that runs." He lapsed into sullen silence. Soon he paused before a quiet house, one of the many which housed in cavernous depths uncounted clerks and other small fry of the city. "Good night to you," said Peter Niburg. Then, rather tardily. "And my thanks. But for you I should now—" he shrugged his shoulders. "Good night, friend," said Nikky. "And better keep your bed tomorrow." He had turned away and Peter Niburg entered the house.
